

Session C4 – The Nuts and Bolts of Building Community-Based Service Systems for CYSHCN

Female: ...faith based...I would say the faith based institutions is the one that we've invited to the table but not quite understanding...I don't think they understand what their piece would be. I direct the North Dakota integrated services grant in North Dakota and so we truly have been trying to invite everybody to the table that needs to be there but yeah, I think they look at it and go why would we be invited to something like this and we kind of go, I'm not really sure what piece they would take there, but...

Female: Did you get any responses to her question?

Female: You were able to provide some good ideas of what some of the faith based institutions in Georgia were doing and so...

Female: Right, and there is a book that is on the website for the National Center for Cultural Competence on working with faith-based groups.

Female: And so there are probably lots of possibilities that even the faith based groups don't know.

Female: Any other aha moments? Now come on you all were so engaged.
Yes?

Session C4 – The Nuts and Bolts of Building Community-Based Service Systems for CYSHCN

Male: I think the most helpful thing for me was kind of getting the sense of unburdening ourselves of the responsibility of doing. I mean our mission statement I kind of feel like Charles Atlas carrying the world on my shoulders because it...never does it say facilitate or empower, it's all we will assure, we will insure, we will do. And that's...it's a big load and again with the changing environment if we don't kind of get that off of our shoulders, I'm not sure that we're going to be able to make that leap. So that's something I'm going to work on...probably tonight actually.

Female: So having more realistic expectations and not doing that more for less kind of attitude?

Male: Any other? This group was really into it. Do you have any aha moments or...? Okay. Well I think we're moving into step three, right? Oh.
